Lessons from the Unexpected

Although the ECK shows us what we need to learn through our spiritual exercises, singing HU and different readings from the Shariat, for me most of my lessons come from unexpected people, places, animals and things. I have gotten my answers to questions from billboard signs, sides of U-Hauls, from random animals and their actions and from conversations with random people. I've learned these are waking dreams and bits of golden tongued wisdom.

Recently, a lesson in gratefulness came from a handyman who was hired to fix our kitchen drawers. He was a white man with a very strong accent, with a British influence. When I asked him where he came from, he stated he came from South Africa, was a refuge of our country due to the senseless killings of the white population done by the larger black population in his area. He was so grateful to be able to bring his family over to the United States for refuge because he stated bluntly, "My family and I would surely have been killed if we weren't able to come here." This man was grateful to have an opportunity to just be in this country of hopes, dreams, and freedoms. What a lesson for me! I think now and then, after talking to this man, what am I grateful for? I surely am grateful for every breath I take, every sunrise and sunset I get to enjoy, even a rainy day or the recent snowy days we all had. This unexpected lesson put my life, my troubles, in perspective. We should be grateful every day, no matter how hard it is for us to get out of bed or do simple tasks or even walk to the mailbox. These struggles should give us pause to stop and be grateful for life around us, for the beauty in a bee that just chased you away from a flower you were smelling, or the dog who wakes you up with excessive barking at two in the morning; I am grateful for waking up at three in the morning to just enjoy the quiet and be able to write this simple message. For every tribulation we have that is unexpected there is a reason. I know for myself, to stop, take a deep breath, HU, and be grateful for the moment. Because moments with the ECK are all we have, simple moments in the present, full of gratitude.
